Rebecca is a compassionate advocate who puts her clients first. Calm and poised, Rebecca brings a fresh and practical perspective to complex legal challenges. Rebecca cares deeply about our client's stories, which drives her advocacy and legal writing toward the best possible outcome.

Before joining Richardson Wang LLP, Rebecca worked her way up in the legal world. She started as a receptionist, became a stellar paralegal, and then went on to law school where she served on the boards of several student organizations and graduated with honors. Rebecca externed under the Appellate Commissioner at the Oregon Court of Appeals, and again at the U.S. District Court of Oregon. She also worked in the Lewis and Clark Small Business Legal Clinic. Rebecca is energized by the camaraderie and passion she sees among her colleagues, former and present. She constantly seeks out new experiences to diversify her perspective and considers herself a lifelong learner.
